

CONTENTS

List of Illustrations	viii
Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction	1
Chapter 1. Does a Decolonized Anthropology Require Reinterpreting the Past?	40
Chapter 2. American Anthropology and Colonialism: A Factual Account	53
Chapter 3. Alfred L. Kroeber's Career and Contributions to California's Indigenous Peoples	78
Chapter 4. American Anthropology, the Cold War, and Intellectual History	98
Chapter 5. Anthropology's Camelot Myth and What We Can Learn from It	115
Chapter 6. Philleo Nash: An Anthropologist Serving the People	128
Chapter 7. A Forgotten Innovator: Haviland Scudder Mekeel and the Expansion of Anthropology	148
Chapter 8. Walter R. Goldschmidt: A Multidimensional Pioneer	163
Chapter 9. Salvage Anthropology Considered: On Redman's Prophets and Ghosts	172
Chapter 10. Four Fields and Sacred Bundles: On Segal and Yanagisako, Unwrapping the Sacred Bundle: Reflections on the Disciplining of Anthropology	178
Chapter 11. Ishi and Kroeber Again: Wild Men in the Eyes of Douglas Sackman	183
Conclusion	190
Index	193